5. Other directorates subordinate to the Ministry are:

- a. The Central Directorate for River Traffic (C.Z. Wodny), which is located in Warsaw and employs about 120 men. It is concerned with marking waterways and issuing appropriate regulations. The directorate has a staff of inspectors, each of whom is responsible for a certain section of a waterway.
- b. The Central Directorate for Refitting Yards (C.Z. Stoczni Remontowych) is located in Gdansk.¹
- c. The Office of Shipbuilding Planning (Biuro Projektow Budowli Morskiego), which is located at 22 Waly Piastowskie Street, Gdansk. It employs about 300 people, including engineers and draftsmen. The office is concerned with planning port installations and facilities, including anchorages, quays, sheds, cranes, and buildings. It occupies a separate building with an old shelter for about 1,000 persons which serves as the regional civil defense command post for the Gdansk district.

6. The military division of the Ministry of Shipping is composed of mobilization, civil defense, and investment departments. The mobilization department (MOB) keeps records (card index form "R-1") of reservists and other personnel in the Ministry, as well as its subordinate bodies, who are eligible for military service, and military inspectors in the Ministry, and its central directorates and divisions report changes in manpower. The department also deals with manpower essential for the national economy in such instances as the release of reservists from call-up, the postponement of compulsory military service, and planning civilian manpower assignments for a wartime economy. This is accomplished by recording the names of various experts, who in time of war will be linked to the Ministry and its related bodies, on a numbered "2 KF" form. These forms are revised every three months, and copies are forwarded to the regional military headquarters (WKR), which keeps the records of regular and reserve units, as well as of replacement units. In early 1957, the department started planning the wartime merger of the merchant navy and the Polish navy in cooperation with the naval command. Existing crews will be assigned to their respective ships in time of war, and port administrations will be directly subordinate to the navy.

7. The civil defense department (TOPL) is responsible for the organization of personnel in the Ministry and its subordinate bodies in accordance with directives of the National Civil Defense Command of the TOPL. The department is also responsible for the construction of shelters, command posts, and emergency stores for civil defense equipment. The civil defense of ports is emphasized.
8. The investment department mainly supervises allocations for the navy from the budget of the Ministry of Shipping (Roboty Postulowane Tajne).² The department controls budgets for repairs and refits of naval craft in civilian dockyards, and certifies their invoices. It also supervises allocations for research carried out for the navy. A special budget, separate from that of the Ministry, finances such work.

Comments:

25X1

1. Dockyards building new ships are incorporated into a central directorate which is subordinate to the Ministry of Machinery.
2. The budget arrangement imperceptibly increases the national defense budget.
